

Ruling on Contributors' Cases

A New York Times analysis of decisions by the Ohio Supreme Court from 1994 to March 2006 found that the justices frequently decided in favor of their campaign contributors who appear before the court, and rarely recuse themselves from those cases.

Notes: Data are based on nonunanimous cases, excluding procedural decisions, decided from 1994 to March 2006. Contributors are defined as parties in cases or groups that filed supporting briefs who gave at least $1,000 in the six years before the court decision. The voting patterns of two former justices -- the late Asher W. Sweeney, who retired in 1994, and J. Craig Wright, who retired in 1996 -- were omitted from the study because complete campaign contribution data were unavailable.
